EXPERIENCE

As a student of Homestead High School I spent every moment possible in the radio station. After high school, I went on to be a leader at Indiana University's Union Board (the student run programming board in charge of booking, promoting and running concerts for national recording artists).

After college, I spent time in Los Angeles with the Planetary Group a boutique music marketing company. I helped promote new music to non-commercial radio stations around the world. Then I came back home and worked as a producer for Federated Media with WOWO and ESPN Radio.

I started working at Homestead in 2013, that year I started an after school club called Audio Aficionados, where each week we listen to a full length album. I am currently a board member for the Middle Waves Music Festival.

WHY DO I TEACH?

I teach to be the avenue for the struggling students to find their voice or passion, as I did when I was in this program as a student. I am driven by connecting with the students who excel and get them push their creative boundaries beyond the basic requirements.

The broadcasting program at Homestead gave me opportunities I would have never dreamed of growing up. The radio station gave me a place to shine and I hope to give right back to any student looking for a place to belong and grow.

ABOUT ANDY

I was born in Fort Wayne and I am a 2006 Homestead graduate. I developed my passion for all things broadcasting and music as a student director for WCYT. I went on to Indiana University Bloomington and majored in telecommunications and an individualized major in the History of Rock and Roll.

In my free time I enjoy going to concerts, traveling, listening to podcasts, watching the Indiana Pacers and running.
